

Gurden our Captain, instead if returning to Archaut with his soldiers, choose to remain on the frontier and organize a mobile defense until reinforcements could be mustered and sent from the near by castle.

With so few troops, Gurden knew that he could not defend the entire section of the frontier, nor hope to defeat an organized thrust by The Uthuk. His plan therefore called for each sector to keep watch, and when The Uthuk were sighted, send couriers to the mobile reserve, while attempting to hold onto the village outposts as long as possible.
